“ I worked with Cedric at Target. I sat with him on all the breaks and we had the best conversations. He always made me laugh. He always got overly excited about these chocolate cupcakes in the vending machine, that he was always certain, were better than the Hostess ones. If he ever had extra food or wanted someone to see how good something was he'd always smile and get super excited and offer for others to try to share in his happiness about it.

We had the most interesting conversations about horoscopes, weird food combinations, work, jokes, funny words, wild stories, about how much he loved his family, life in general, you name it.

He was such a hard worker and always willing to help someone out. He could start a conversation with just about anyone. He had an attitude about life where he always found something to be excited about or something to look forward to. That was my favorite part about him.

I take awhile to warm up to people but something about Cedric always just made me feel so comfortable. I was always excited to see him and talk to him about anything. I always would ask “haaay is Cedric here today?!”

He will be missed by me, a lot.

Sending lots of love, thoughts & prayers

“ My sympathy to the Hiatt family. I hadn't seen Cedric in many years, but I recognize that smile in the picture as the same impish smile Cedric had in first grade. Gone much too soon.
