“ Where to start remembering?? The Faivre brothers, Frank's Dad and our Dad, had adjoining farms in Maytown and the families naturally blended as well into friends for life. Frank was an instigator and an ally and a big brother, depending on the activity of the day. He was into engineer boots and Elvis and playing his guitar, a star of cousins' gatherings, always ready with an idea and a story and a game he had just made up. He inherited his Dad's story telling style and his mother's appreciation for nature in all its glory. We loved you then and we love you now, Frank. See you again one day as we gather at a family table! John, Clare, Marianne, Janice, we will be thinking of you as you take leave of your brother; Kathy, Marty, and Chuck, our sympathy in your loss.

“Frank was the absolute best boss a person could ask for. I worked for him for 3 years then he retired. He was the kindest man I had the privilege of calling my friend. Rest in paradise sweet Frank. You are free.”
